“ We knew him as Frank. My husband and I thought a lot of Frank and am so sorry he has passed. He was a good man. He told such great stories and laughed easily. He was a bright spot in our lives. We miss him. And we know we were fortunate to know him.

“ Raymond, or Frank, as he was better known as, was a true friend. We had known him for only six years. He was a hard worker and welcome company. He did not let the struggles in life dim his spirit, but was welcoming and generous to others and always willing to help, when he could. He had a lot to overcome. Preceeded in death by his father and wife, I am sure he was greeted with open arms as he passed into Heaven.

“ We miss Frank. Frank and my husband used to work on our yard together. Sometimes I would hear them talking through an open window. They often sounded like an old married couple bickering about something, but then they often sounded like two wise sages working through all the troubles of the world.
